Introduction

“Traffic is an essential part of your business and we all need it to succeed”

One of the key elements to making money from your online business is to generate traffic to your websites. One way or another we all need visitors to our websites to create income. Without traffic your site may as well be dead!

A tough pill to swallow but this is the truth...

No traffic means no visitors, no subscribers or members and ultimately no income!

You see without traffic we would not be able to turn subscribers or website visitors into customers. Without a steady stream of traffic, it's going to be very hard to create an income very hard indeed.

One single source of traffic will not usually create all the traffic you will ever need to your websites, unless you are running ad campaigns (something we will discuss in time). The secret is a combination of traffic streams to create those explosive traffic stats you always wanted.

Now we don't claim to be the best traffic guru's on the planet, but you will find in the Big Traffic Guide some of the traffic secrets we use every day. All it takes is a little work each day to see results.

If you follow the advice in this book, we guarantee you will see improvements in traffic flows to your websites, blogs and online businesses.

Remember, if you attract just a handful of visitors to your business and convert these people to subscribers, this book has done its job. Simply repeat your success.

In advance thank you for reading and let's get started!

Content Marketing

If you've been moving in digital marketing circles for a while, you've probably heard it said that 'content is king'.

And it's not without reason, because when done right content marketing is a mind-blowing powerful strategy.

Just how powerful?

Well, research has shown that it can cost up to 62% less than traditional marketing and generate about three times as many leads.

If you want to start driving more traffic to your website, then there is one single thing that you need to be doing.

This indisputable, critical aspect of your marketing is non-negotiable and has the biggest potential for increasing your viewers, your authority, and your engagement.

“That is to apply content marketing”

What is Content Marketing?

Content marketing is about using media such as blogs, newsletters, social posts, videos and infographics to draw customers towards you. How? By providing value upfront.

“Content marketing flips the script on traditional marketing. Instead of roaring at your audience through a megaphone, content marketing transforms your business into a powerful magnet that pulls customers to your doorstep by simply using valuable content”.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

The reason this is so crucial is simple: the internet is built on content. Most of the time you spend online will likely be either reading or watching videos, both of which are examples of content consumption.

To find that content, you probably searched for a phrase or term in Google, and Google will then have matched your query to content that it had indexed.

Why You Need to Implement Content Marketing

When you add high-quality content to your website on a regular basis, you achieve a number of things:

- You provide free value
- You demonstrate your knowledge and expertise in your niche and become an expert
- You increase brand awareness and trust exponentially
- You provide Google with a means of understanding what your site is about
- You create more pages for your site, each of which can then act as a potential entry point to your site and your brand
- You gain a commodity (a blog or website) that you can share on social media
- You increase the likelihood of people who enjoy your content sharing it with other people: thereby giving you free links and free exposure
- You gain valuable subscribers you can turn into buyers

How To Write an Engaging Blog Post

One of the key ingredients to your success then is to write a high quantity and high quality articles. The more you write, the more opportunity you create to be discovered. The more questions you can answer, and the more people you can engage with.

As a starting point, we recommend writing at least one blog post a week then step it up a notch. Far preferable would be 3-4 posts per week, and potentially even a post a day depending on your speed and knowledge of your niche.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

What's arguably more important, though, is that you learn to write high-quality content. If you get this wrong, then it doesn't matter how many articles and posts you write. Your content could be ignored.

Only a high-quality blog post will increase the likelihood of someone returning to your website, and only a high-quality blog post will increase the likelihood that your site will get shared.

“At this point you should be thinking always provide quality over quantity”

What Does The Perfect Blog Post Look Like?

First and most important is that your post should not be derivative. This means you should not be sharing content for the sake of it. Every single post needs to have something unique to say.

Let's consider two approaches using a highly popular niche as an example - a fitness blog?

One blog post on fitness is an exclusive interview with the elusive and extremely in-demand 'Ido Portal Method'.

This is a completely unique approach to training and one that has set the social media world on fire for several years now (this is real content, Google it).

The other is an article called '5 Exercises for Six Pack Abs.'

Which will perform better?

The way this question has been phrased means that it may be obvious. But for many, it is not. In fact, many articles and gurus will claim that the latter is superior.

On the face of it, the second title looks like a goldmine. Everyone wants six-pack abs would you agree. This is an extremely high-volume keyword/keyphrase (meaning people search for it a lot), and it has a great list format.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

But here's the problem: most of us have read thousands of articles just like it! This is an issue because it means that no one is going to be that excited by it.

Which article would you be more likely to want to click?

Even if it comes up at the top of the SERPs (Search Engine Results Pages), an article still needs to entice the visitor to click on it because they want to read it!

Then there's the issue of this content being so competitive. With thousands of similar articles, how will you make sure your article gets to the top of Google?

On the other hand, the 'Ido Portal Method' interview is unique content that has a built-in following. People who love Ido Portal are almost guaranteed to like and share this post, especially if you can get it to the right places by sharing it on social media.

Anyone who hasn't heard of him might have their interest piqued in the following way... A new approach to fitness? Really? What is a "movement first" attitude anyway... interesting, let's check it out.

Then there are the long-tail keywords. You might not easily be able to rank for a top keyword with this post, but people will find you when they search for related long keyword terms such as:

- Movement culture
- Just move
- Ido Portal Movement
- Ido Portal
- Ido Portal interview

These searches can get you a decent number of targeted visitors (meaning they are visitors that will find your content interesting and be likely to buy from you). They can also bring you an increasing number of visitors as these terms grow.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

“Long tail Key working like this, means you don’t have to battle for a highly used phrase such as ‘Rock Hard Abs’. You only have to be specific enough to generate a good amount of traffic that truly interested people are searching for”.

Post lots of content like this – long-form and at least 800-1500 words and then make an effort to really share it around. Promote each blog post like you would promote an entirely new product!

Do all this, and you'll find that your content helps to gradually increase in-roads to your site, while at the same time building up your reputation, exposure, and influence.

SEO

The other piece of the puzzle when it comes to high-quality content is SEO.

The chances are that you know what SEO is. SEO is a series of techniques that can be used to get a website to reach the top of Google. This stands for "Search Engine Optimization."

This is a topic that has been written about countless times and changes daily. The problem is that many of these blog posts, articles, and videos only serve to muddy the waters and create more confusion regarding precisely what SEO is all about.

It's certainly true that SEO is changing all the time, and that it is multifaceted. This can make it difficult to know where or even how to focus your efforts.

But ultimately, there are two crucial ingredients for effective SEO and one important rule that binds them together.

The ingredients are:

- Keywords
- Links

And the important rule is:

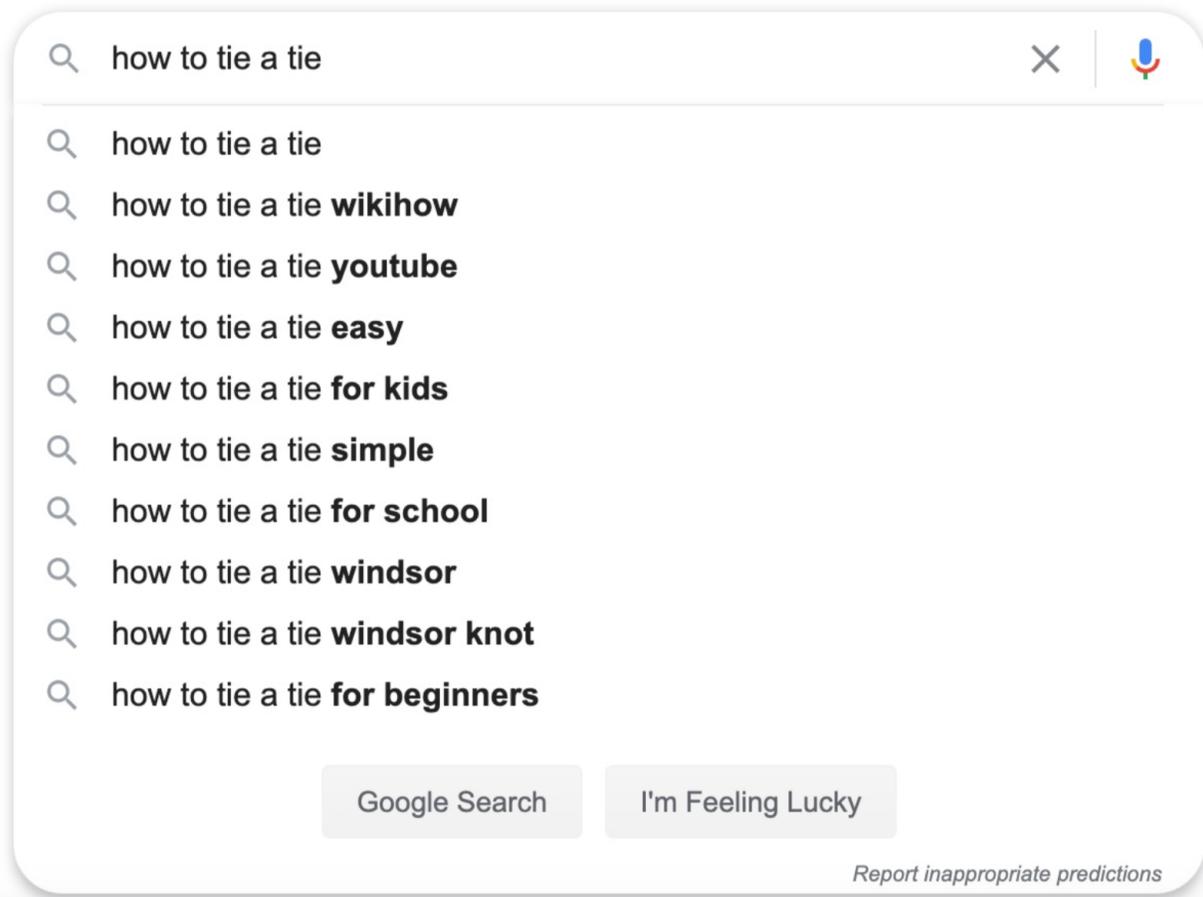

- Provide value
- Keywords

Google works by finding content and adding it to a huge database (an index) where it keeps every single one of its links. When somebody searches for a phrase, Google then refers to that database in order to retrieve the most relevant, high-quality webpage to attempt to answer the question.

BIG TRAFFIC GUIDE

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Keywords are what Google uses to recognize the content of a webpage and thereby to know who to show it to. We want our website to be shown to as many people as possible, and so we should look for keywords that a lot of people are searching for.

More often than not, this will mean looking for popular phrases and things that are currently trending.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

To show Google that our content is highly relevant to that keyword, we then need to lace our website with those keywords as much as possible.

One way to do this is by repeating the phrase throughout our content. We don't want to overdo this though, or it will look like we're trying to spam the system.

“The best way to include keywords in content is to try and make the keyword often appear, while simultaneously avoiding doing too much. The best advice is to follow a rule of 0.5-2% density. That means that you should include a keyword once every 50-200 words. Be guided by what feels natural: if it is going to stand out to the reader as forced, then leave it out as the content won't read well.

It is far better to “underdo” your SEO than it is to overdo it!”

LSI (Latent Semantic Indexing)

Moreover, you should aim to use related terms and synonyms. This is what is referred to as "latent semantic indexing" or LSI. This is how Google looks for the kinds of increased use of specific phrases that would naturally occur in a post about a given subject. It's important for you to understand the subject you are writing about well so that you can naturally include all of the related terms and phrases that you would normally when writing in that niche!

Note: This is also how you go about covering new ground when writing blog posts. We mentioned before how important it was to avoid writing derivative and "overplayed" content. The only way you can go about doing this is to make sure that the content you write is in a topic that you understand and you are passionate about.

9 Other Elements to Optimize For Search Engines

There are also some particular areas in a post that benefit particularly from the use of keywords. These are:

BIG TRAFFIC GUIDE

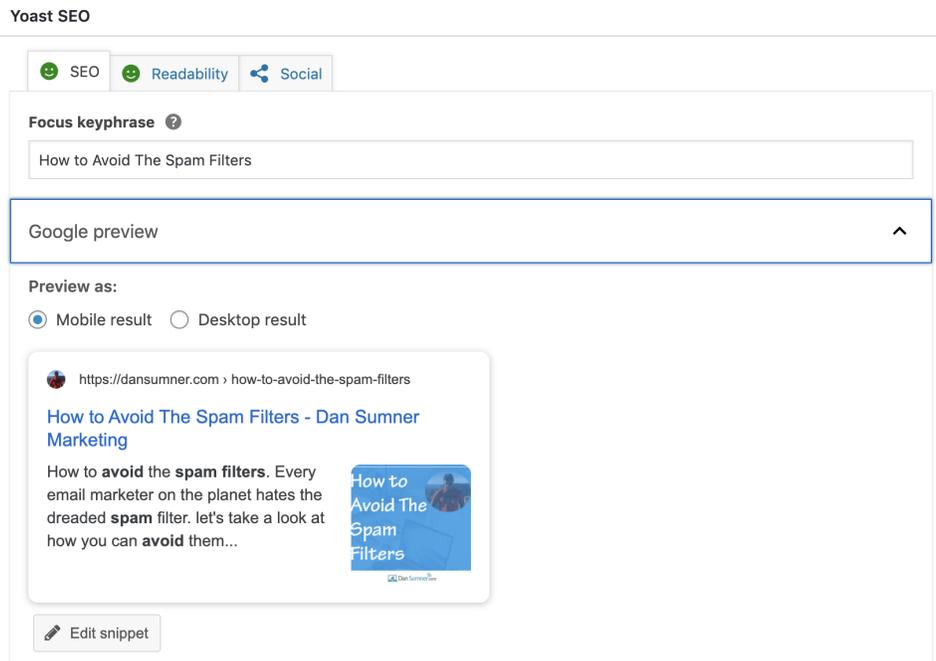

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

1. The title
2. The first paragraph
3. Headers throughout the text
4. The last paragraph

You should also aim to use the keyphrases in the code and file names of your website. Useful ways to include this include:

5. Alt tags for images
6. Meta description
7. SEO title
8. File names for images
9. The slug of your web page

(note - If you use the Yoast SEO Plugin discussed below, all the above elements can be added to within the Wordpress plugin for each post:

Should You Only Target One Keyword or Keyphrase?

It's okay to target more than one keyword, and in fact, a good strategy is to have one "primary" keyword along with a couple of secondary options.

If you can do all this as much as possible without making it stand out obviously to the reader, then you will have effectively laced your content with keywords!

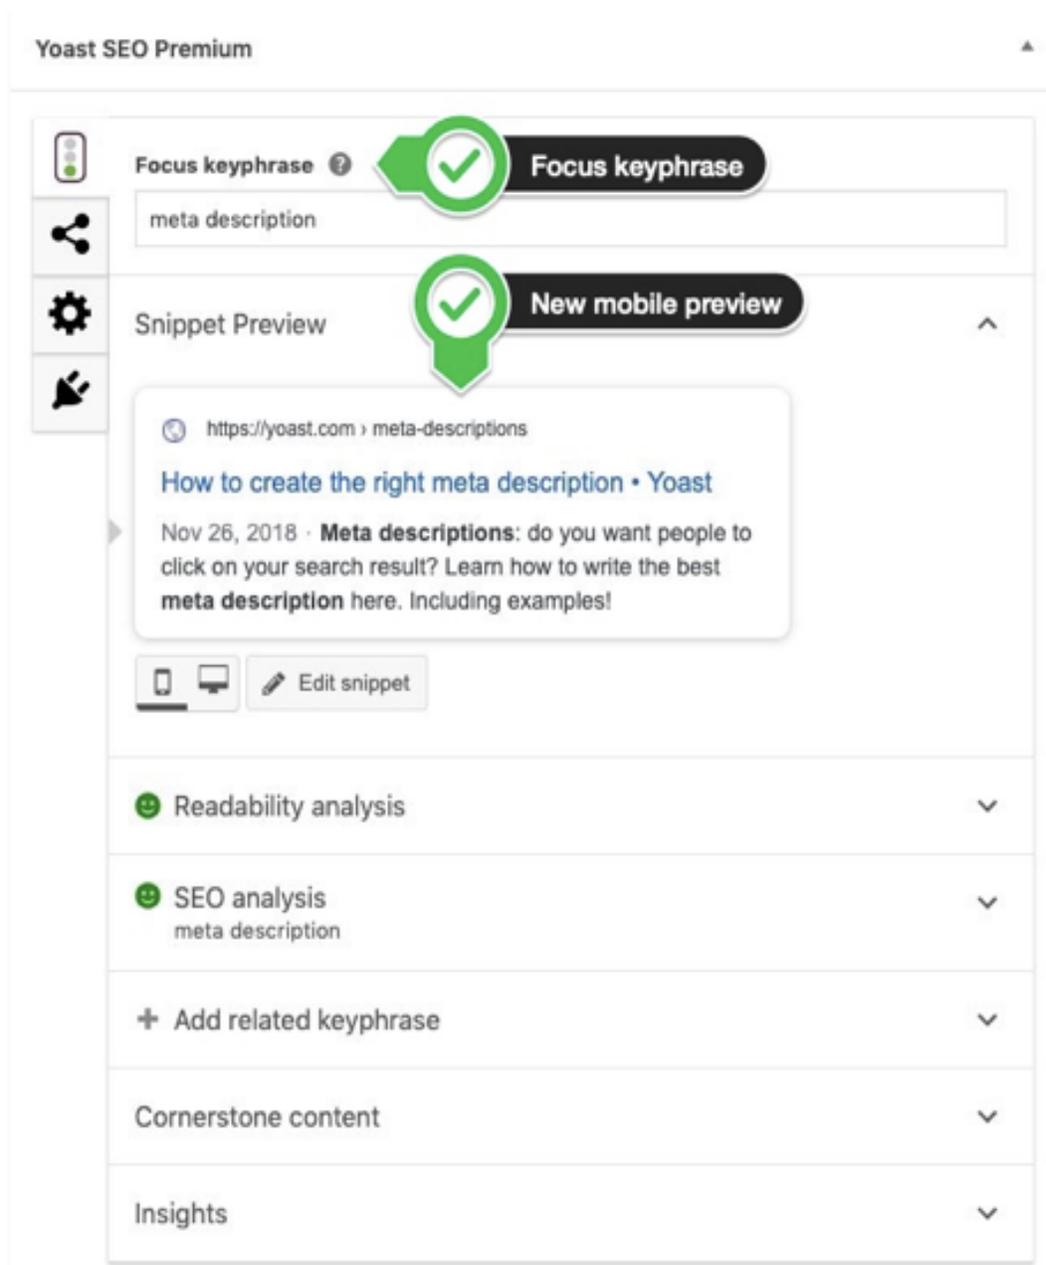

As mentioned, if you're not sure of how to do this and you are using WordPress to run your website, then you can always try using a powerful tool called YoastSEO (<https://yoast.com/wordpress/plugins/seo>).

This plugin will look at the content of your blog posts, and it will highlight areas where your SEO could be better: by using more search terms in your opening and closing paragraphs for example, or by using keywords in your headers.

When using YoastSEO, you shouldn't expect to reach a "green status" every single time. Some articles will have a great social media value, but won't lend themselves naturally to SEO. Other articles will have keywords that are difficult to fit into your content. The aim is simply to be aware of these methods and to tick all the boxes as often as possible. This is the mindset to have when performing SEO for your website and webpages.

3 Types of Keywords You Need to Know About

There are 3 types of keyword you need to know about:

- Short Keywords - broad concepts, e.g. swimming
- Medium Keywords - narrowed down concept, e.g. swimming goggles
- Long-tail Keywords - more specific again, e.g. swimming goggles for triathlon

Typically, short keywords are the hardest to rank for, followed by medium and then long-tail. This is because there is less competition for long-tail keywords. So, we'll be aiming mainly to target longer-tail keywords with 2-4 words. Think about these to suit your niche or business and even geographic location if you are a bricks and mortar business.

How to Find Keywords Using The Google Keyword Planner Tool

Of course, there is one more step when it comes to building an effective SEO campaign using keywords... and that is to actually find the right keywords in the first place. How do you know what people are searching for?

To do this, you can use Google's Keyword Planner Tool.

Step 1. Go to <https://ads.google.com/home/tools/keyword-planner/>

Step 2. Sign in to your Google account

Step 3. Select the option that says Discover new keywords

The screenshot shows the Google Ads Keyword plan interface. The search term is "swimming goggles". The interface includes a sidebar with navigation options like "Keyword ideas", "Grouped ideas", "Plan overview", "Ad groups", "Keywords", and "Locations". The main content area shows a search bar with "swimming goggles" and a "Broaden your search" section with buttons for "goggle", "sunglasses", "swimming equipment", and "swimming ey". Below this, there is a filter section for "Exclude adult ideas" and "ADD FILTER" with a note that "2,199 keyword ideas available". A table displays the results:

<input type="checkbox"/>	Keyword (by relevance) ↓	Avg. monthly searches	Competition
Keywords you provided

<input type="checkbox"/>	speedo goggles	10K – 100K	High
<input type="checkbox"/>	prescription goggles	10K – 100K	High
<input type="checkbox"/>	best swimming goggles	10K – 100K	High

This tool is aimed at customers using Google Ads, but it can help you to get an idea of the volume of traffic looking for any given keyphrase.

The screenshot above shows the average monthly searches for "swimming goggles" is 10K – 100K. That means this keyphrase gets searched 10,000 to 100,000 times each month.

Which Keywords Should You Go For?

The aim is to look for keywords that have a high volume of traffic, but not too much competition.

As with most things, the more established your site is (meaning it has "domain age" as well as lots of backlinks and tons of content), the more easily you'll be able to go after the highest-ranking keywords. A great strategy then is to view this as a ladder. When starting out, go for the low- hanging fruit. Aim to get to the top of Google for those terms that are a little more obscure, but that could still get you a few hundred visitors per month.

This will then help you to establish yourself a little in the eyes of Google, which will, in turn, then allow you to go after slightly more popular links!

Another extremely important thing to consider is the matter of "intent." Intent refers to the intention of the person searching for the keyphrase: what are they looking for and why?

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

This is very important because it is what will ensure you attract the right people to your website. For instance, someone might phrase a term differently depending on whether they want to buy something or just ask about it.

"Hats online" AND "buy hats online" are probably keywords that suggest a person is looking to buy a hat. If you have a hat store, then this can be a great way to get people to your site!

But if you have an article that is all about hat style, then calling it "hats online" will likely mean you get the wrong type of person visiting your page. This can, in turn, mean that they leave that page very quickly, which in turn means your "bounce rate" will be high (meaning people leave your site before they have spent any time there). A high bounce rate significantly hurts your reputation in Google's eyes, and it means that Google will stop recommending your site when people search for related terms!

It's not just about what you can rank for then: it's about understanding your visitors and what they might be looking for.

Backlinks

Backlinks play three important roles in Google's systems. Firstly, they allow Google to find your content in the first place. Google trawls the web using programs called "spiders" or sometimes "robots." These programs work by following links to move from one website to another.

So by having as many backlinks to your website as possible, you make it easier for Google to find you and therefore put you in the index.

At the same time, Google looks at links as another way to know what your site is about. If your site has lots of links coming from sites about fitness, then it will assume that your site is also about fitness!

Finally, Google will look at links as testimony. Links suggest quality because people don't tend to share links to websites that they don't think are very good!

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

The more backlinks you have to your site, the more Google will consider your site to be important and valuable. Much MORE importantly, though, Google will also want to see that your links are coming from pages that it already trusts.

For instance, if you have a link from the BBC, Google will consider that to be endlessly more worthwhile than a link from a website that is full of spam.

Looking for links that Google is known to trust is perhaps the single best way to increase your chances of climbing the ranks. One way to do this is to look for links with .edu and .gov TLDs (Top Level Domains). Another option is to look for the sites that Google commonly features in the SERPs.

Finally, look at the top competition that you want to beat and then use a backlink checker that will show you the links point at that website. You can then try to get those same sites to link to you – as you know that they a) will give out links and b) can help you get to where you need to be!

The Best Way to Get Backlinks From Other Sites?

Guest post! That means writing a high-quality article for that website, then giving it to the website for free in exchange for a link that will point back to your website. This strategy has been used online for a long time, but it is still highly effective. Not only does this gain you a link back from a site in your niche that is high value, but it also helps you to build important relationships that can help you to succeed. You'll gain direct traffic from the recommendation that comes from being on a high-quality website.

One more tip? If you are going to succeed at guest posting (and SEO in general), then your website needs to be high quality. This is another way to keep bounce rates low, but it also ensures that bloggers in other niches will want to work with you.

Be honest with yourself: go and take a hard look at the very best/biggest blog/website in your niche. Can you honestly say that your website competes with that site in terms of presentation and content quality?

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

A top creator is not going to want to link to you if your site is covered in ads, or if it looks like it was built in the Geocities era (the early 00s, for those not familiar with their early websites!). You need to look the part if you're going to succeed. And this plays out in another way too.

Value

It's important to remember that Google serves the user. That is to say that Google is not interested in making life easier for blog owners. If your website provides valuable and useful information, then Google will want to share it with its visitors.

Why? Because if Google's visitors constantly find the high-quality content they are looking for – if they consistently have a good experience when searching on Google – then they will want to do it more often!

If Google's visitors find that the websites that get brought up are low quality, or that they don't contain the right information (mismatch between intent and content), then they will eventually stop using Google.

That's why Google looks at key factors such as the amount of time spent on your website when determining your potential ranking. It's why Google favors brands over sites that focus purely on keywords, and it's why Google is now strongly emphasizing the importance of a website that loads quickly and that performs well on mobile. If your website is not mobile- friendly and slow loading, then fixing that limitation should be one of your chief concerns!

This is why Google is constantly changing its algorithm. The algorithm defines how Google searches for content, and thus bloggers and site owners are constantly trying to second guess it in order to unravel the secret formula to success. If only they can find out what Google is looking for, then they will be able to build successful web pages every single time!

Google doesn't make its algorithms public though, and so SEO optimizers are left to guess. They will then often come to conclusions such as "Google wants to see 3% density for keywords" or "Google wants you to collect as many links as humanly possible."

The problem is that Google will then invariably change the goalposts by altering its algorithm. Suddenly, collecting thousands of links without giving any regard to their quality is actually going to hurt your website's ranking! In fact, this precise thing happened once, and it led to many websites being completely removed from Google (this is called being "de-indexed.")

Historic algorithm changes like this have put huge companies out of business and devastated entire industries! And those people trying to optimize their websites had only been doing what other companies had told them to do for marketing purposes. They had only been doing what they thought Google wanted them to do!

Of course, this is a difficult subject. After all, this has seriously affected many people's lives – and Google's monopoly over search gives the company responsibility to businesses.

But at the same time, Google never asked those businesses to try and "game" the algorithm. The company never came out and stated that people should be building links on low-quality websites.

Those business owners that followed this approach simply missed the point: that Google serves the customer.

We can't predict future changes to the algorithm, but we can guarantee that Google is trying to serve the visitor first (while also taking care of its own needs, by ensuring people stay on its own pages for longer). As long as you focus on delivering high-quality content on a well-designed website, and as long as your content answers the questions posed in the search terms, then your goals will be aligned with Google's, and you should benefit from future changes.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Rich Snippets

One more aspect to consider for your marketing is the use of rich snippets. Rich snippets show a higher quantity of information from your website, often with a bulleted list, or an image.

These are used by Google to try and keep visitors on the SERPs for longer. Google ideally would love to cut out content creators altogether in order to retain that valuable traffic! Thus, Google's spiders can look for specific elements in your text and share those directly with visitors. These include things like dates and locations of events, as well as recipes, the answers to questions, and more.

Here is an example of what a rich snippet search result looks like:

Social Media Marketing

Social media for marketing is a concept that is hugely misunderstood by the vast majority of big brands trying to bring more traffic to their websites.

You see this all the time. Take a look at many of the brands on Facebook or Twitter, and you'll see them repeating the same mistakes. Primarily, that means posting over and over again about the same promotional nonsense, without giving any thought to strategy or value.

These posts look like this:

- Why not sign up to our mailing list today to find out more about our business?
- Did you know that our CRM system was rated the top new software product last year?
- Sign up now for 20% off of our latest software package!
- Is your business doing everything it can to maximize efficiency?

And on and on!

Answer this: would you consider following a social media account that only published these types of comments?

The answer for us is no, and the reason is obvious: there is no value being provided here!

What's more, is that these messages will be sporadic and random and with no real goal in mind. Then the owner of the business wonders why they don't see the huge numbers they feel they deserve for their efforts!

There are four key things you need to understand if you are going to successfully use social media to drive traffic:

- Value
- Community
- Integration
- Consistency

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Value

This should be obvious. If you want people to follow you on any platform, then you need to give them a good reason to do so. That means that you need to be able to offer some kind of value for their time, their effort, and their contact details.

In the case of social media, there are a few ways you can do this.

On Instagram, the best fitness brands don't just post random pictures of themselves topless. Instead, they combine these pictures with useful insights and information that might help someone reading to improve their own training and results.

Likewise, if you run a business brand, you can provide useful money-making tips. If you run a blog about makeup, you should provide tips that can help someone create a better look.

What's key to understand here is that this is not just true for independent blogs. Many businesses assume that providing tips is "unprofessional" and should be left to the influencers. They instead want to post business stuff.

You can be as professional as you like though. If no one wants to read what you have to say, then you aren't going to get any followers! Anyone who does follow will leave.

Why would you want to see what amounts to advertising all over your home feed?

Another challenge for businesses is finding a way to offer value in what might be a very dull niche. For example, if you offer life insurance, then what could you offer to your readers that might be relevant? Makeup tips are hardly applicable here!

In this case, it is perfectly acceptable to think a little outside the box, to think about what you can offer that will provide value for the target audience.

Someone looking for life insurance is likely to be:

- An adult
- Married with children
- A homeowner
- Health-conscious and money conscious

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Therefore, you might provide regular tips for families, ideas for days out, ways to stay healthy, ways to save money. These are things that benefit the target audience while being tangentially relevant to the services or products you are offering.

If 90% of your posts provide genuine value on this subject matter, then the other 10% can be used to promote your service and to drive sales. This works in any niche, as long as you are consistent.

Selling the Dream

There's another, less tangible way that you can deliver value to your audience through social media too. That is to focus on inspiring your audience. This is something that Instagram, in particular, is very well-known for.

The idea is simple: people follow brands because they want to feel inspired and motivated. For example, you might follow a fitness brand because you are inspired by images of people going for long runs or training hard at the gym. These images sell a "dream" and a value proposition: they make the viewer think about how they might feel if they were to achieve a similar level of fitness.

Meanwhile, brands about making money online might post images of themselves working hard at a computer through the night. Or they might post images of them giving talks in front of thousands of people, or looking out of highrise buildings wearing sharp suits.

Think about the "dream" that your business is selling and show this through your social media. If you can do this, then you will bring a large audience on board that will not only loyally follow your content, but also be more likely to visit your website – and buy any products you sell or recommend.

Community

Another more nebulous subject that is nevertheless extremely important when it comes to promoting your brand on social media is the idea of community.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Too many companies believe that social media is essentially a foghorn: a tool that they can use to shout loudly and reach a loud audience with a marketing message.

But social media is much more than that. In fact, primarily, social media is a communication tool! Understanding this is what will allow you to tap into its full power.

When you post something to social media, it's very important that you also engage with the audience who comment on it. Likewise, you should actively participate in other discussions or comment on other images.

This helps your audience to feel as though they know you, which once again makes them far more loyal to your business. You'll find they are then more likely to:

- Share your content
- Visit your website multiple times
- Engage with future posts

Think about it this way: if you were to ask your friends to share your links, chances are they would go above and beyond the call of duty to do so. Imagine if you can create a legion of followers with that same sense of duty to you!

A great strategy is to create a Facebook group. This will allow you to develop a particularly loyal audience that you can almost guarantee will visit your site for every new post.

Integration

I also mentioned the importance of having a strategy. That means knowing how your social media is going to fit into a broader plan to promote your business and drive traffic to a website.

What's the point of developing fantastic social media presence if you're not going to do anything with it? This is another typical mistake for many businesses.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

The answer is to use each of your "platforms" to promote each of your other platforms. You can do this in a few ways:

- Reminding people to follow you on social media in your content
- Reminding people to visit your website from your social media posts
- Sharing (high value) content from your website to your social media accounts
- Including social sharing buttons on your website so that people can easily share your post
- Re-sharing old posts on social media – you don't only have to post new content!
- Including social links on your homepage
- Even including a feed right on your website – so that people who visit can easily see that they can follow you through other places too

Consistency

Finally, none of this will work unless you are consistent. If your social media accounts are like ghost towns for months on end, then you won't see them grow! Not only does this play badly with the algorithms, but it also looks unprofessional!

Consistency means posting regularly, but it also means having consistent messaging, branding, and quality. That means your content should be on as many platforms as possible, but it also means that you should have a consistent brand and style across all of those platforms. Your logo and URL should be recognizable between Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter!

Article Marketing Benefits

Article Marketing is one of or if not the cheapest forms of traffic generation in the business and probably the oldest, so some people find it dated, but it still has a place in traffic generation.

“This technique is older, but we’ve kept it here because it still has a relevance to traffic generation”.

99.9% of all articles sites are free so you have the ability to utilise free traffic for very little time and effort. There are a lot of article marketing sites around so the choices are quite infinite to whom you would like to spend your time subscribing too, but the benefits can be good! A quick Google search of the top articles sites is easily done.

By placing an article on article websites, you will find that your own articles can be linked to and used by others generating you a good stream of traffic to the article.

As we have previously discussed, you can also create a quality backlink to your blogs and websites, which also helps with your Google reputation as a valued domain.

Being an article author also projects expertise in your field which also inspires trust from your readers.

How many Articles can I write?

You can write as many articles as you like on a weekly basis and submit them all to article websites, however this can become quite time consuming. You do have choices at this point with regard to maximum exposure. You can spend the time and do it every day manually, alternatively you can use an article submission company such as Submit Your Article which will submit unlimited amounts of articles for you to a great number of sites, thus making your job very easy. All you have to do is write your content and submit.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

What if I Can't Write?

This may sound crazy, but everyone can write something. Granted some can write better than others however if you do have an interest in your chosen niche, then you are halfway to achieving your goal of writing articles. Please remember your hobbies are not necessarily going to be profitable ones. If your hobby is running a flea circus, then I would hardly think you have a niche for profit, so beware, try to write about quality niches and profitable ones rather than hobbies.

“Keyword tools can help greatly to find the value of most niches and how popular these niches are with people.”

If you really can't write then you can use PLR products and suppliers to help you. Sites such as PLR Monthly and PLR Monster supply fresh ebooks and articles which you can use as your own for submission. You can also use ghost writers to write articles for you which are available to hire from companies such as freelancer and upwork for a small fee.

Article Frequency

A good aim for articles is around 5 per week if you can manage it. That's around 260 per year if you are bang on 5 per week, which will bring you a very nice free traffic stream. The only work you will be doing to get this stream is submitting articles which for the work it's a small price to pay to get there.

You should also aim to create an article around 500 - 1000 words. This amount should be enough to provide good quality information within the content for the reader to gain the required outcome from your writings.

Quick Tip: Try to link back to something of value from your article bio signature, this way when the reader browses your article they can click the link back to your site or product and you can achieve a sale or email signup.

“Don’t expect a flood of traffic overnight, this system is long term and will take time but the rewards will benefit you in the long run so it’s definitely worth doing as the cost is minimal and rewards good.

Write good content with good grammar as this does help a lot for the reader. There is nothing worse than a spelling typo and/or bad grammar to place your article in jeopardy and lose the reader and future customers will not click your links as a result.”

Paid Advertising

While all of these techniques can make a big difference to traffic, we are so far missing out on one major strategy for generating traffic for a website and that is paid advertising.

If you want to get eyeballs on your website, then paying for ads is one of the most effective strategies.

That's because paid ads guarantee you a top spot for a particular keyword, or guarantee that you will get targeted exposure to the right people via social media. Why? You're paying for it, simple.

“Paying for ads far outweighs free traffic any day of the week!”

Facebook Ads and Google Ads

There are two major forms of paid advertising that are popular on the web for smaller businesses with modest budgets. These are:

- Google Ads
- Facebook Ads
- Instagram Ads (part of Facebook ads)

Google Ads is particularly effective as it will help you to get your links to the very top of Google. These are the ads that show above the "organic results" as sponsored links. This places them in a prominent place, and it means that you can target the same intent as you might do with SEO.

In other words, you can show your ads to someone who has searched for how to buy the product that you sell! Or that has searched for the kind of information you specifically provide. This is extremely valuable.

Google Ads also have the benefit of letting you test different search terms to see, which might bring the most traffic. You can this way ensure that a particular search term will be worth chasing after with SEO strategies.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Facebook Ads work slightly differently by showing ads on the home feeds of Facebook users. This time, you will target the position of your ad based on the interests and details of the user. As users, we give an awful lot of information to Facebook:

- Age
- Sex
- Location
- Interests
- Relationship status
- Hobbies
- Social network
- Job title
- Potentially even income!

This means that if you run a website selling wedding dresses, then you can use Facebook to show ads to:

- Women
- With high disposable income
- Young to middle aged
- Single
- Who are local
- Who are engaged

PPC Explained

What makes both Ads and Facebook Ads particularly powerful, though, is that these are both forms of PPC advertising. PPC stands for "Pay Per Click", and it essentially means that the advertiser only pays if someone clicks on the ad.

Therefore, if your ad is unsuccessful in getting attention, it won't cost you anything! If your ad is shown and no one clicks on it, you'll gain brand exposure completely free!

What's more, is that this system allows you to calculate exactly how much you are willing to pay for each of your visitors, which in turn can guarantee a profit.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Pay per click advertising works using a bidding system. This means that you choose the maximum amount that you are willing to pay for your ad. When a relevant slot comes up for your ad to show, you will then enter into a bidding war with any other advertisers that are trying to advertise in the same spot. The advertiser with the highest maximum bid will be the one that wins, and you'll only pay the amount necessary to get the position.

That means that a lot of the time, you actually won't need to pay the full amount you have pledged, you might pay just 10 cents! It also means that the more competitive a keyword is, the more you will need to pay.

But what this also means is that you can now calculate the maximum amount you pay for each visitor. You can then measure this against your CLV (Customer Lifetime Value), and that way find out precisely how much you are profiting from your campaign.

For example, if you sell an ebook for $50 and you have a conversion rate of 2%, that means that you will earn $100 for every 100 visitors (this is just hypothetical – that would be an extremely high conversion rate in reality).

Now if you have a maximum bid of anything under $1, that should almost guarantee profit as long as the ads run for long enough!

Things to Remember When Using PPC

PPC is a very effective tool for creating traffic. I mean why not? With the right ads and a little investment you can be on page one of your chosen key search and receiving all the traffic.

Here are a few things to bare in mind when creating your PPC ads and campaigns:

1. Always remember to keep your budget in mind and not overspend as ads can become expensive. Remember to monitor your spending and check your return on your investment and maintain a balance of profit and investment.
2. Ensure you do your research when it comes to keywords. Use the keyword tools provided and get the best out of your ads and your target market to gain the type of traffic you want. Bad traffic can be costly.

3. Remember to create an advert which is not going to attract the freebie hunter. Test your results and aim to convert every click into a customer with a good ad and equally good website design and content.
4. Monitor your results from your keywords and the clicks you get. Google Adwords and Facebook ads manager control panels' have some great tools to help you make the most from your ads and get the most from your campaigns. Remember the first ad is not necessarily the best one. Test, test and test again.

Video Ads

Another extremely powerful tool that is under-utilized by a lot of marketers is video. Video ads shown on YouTube (before videos) and Instagram (in the feed) have a huge potential to make a massive impact on your visitors. That's because these videos have the potential to make a massive impact that makes a strong impression for your brand.

Think about a big influencer like Tai Lopez. Even though he is now being called out for being a "fake guru", he has created popularity by using video ads. The campaign "Here in My Garage" showed before a huge number of videos and was highly memed for being extremely transparent. But it also got people talking about Tai, and it led to a huge number of visitors for his real YouTube account.

Imagine the potential impact you could have by using video ads, but combining it with a high energy ad that built up excitement and emotion for your website and your products and services! Of course, we're not saying to be like Tai Lopez, that was just an example of the power of video ads.

Building a Brand

We have discussed a wide range of different strategies for generating website traffic in this book. We have discussed everything from using traditional SEO to more modern strategies like Schema.org markup language. We've looked at the importance of page optimization, and we've discussed the use of advertising.

But there are countless other strategies for bringing traffic to your website. And one of the big things I want to emphasize before we part ways is that you can promote every single post on your site like you would promote a new product.

That means you should be sharing your content on forums that discuss those topics. It means you should be reaching out to members of the press (especially other big blogs), and it means you should be teasing your audience days prior to its release.

Do everything you can in your power to create "buzz" around every one of your posts, and utilize all the resources you have available to you.

The Importance of a Strong Brand to Bring Everything Together

A big bulk of this book has focused on the importance of delivering value, of offering something new, and of inspiring the audience.

If you can learn to do this, then you will find that your content stands out and that you generate a HUGE amount of traffic over time. This is FAR more effective than attempting to use short-term strategies to gain visitors by spamming the web.

It may take time, but you will stand out, and you will grow.

Why is that? Because 99% of brands online just don't care.

I've worked with a whole lot of them. And so often, I see the same thing time and again. A client comes along to order some work, and they show me their website.

Their website doesn't have a brand. The name of their website is the keyword (www.getgreatabs.com). They don't believe me when I tell them about the 1% LSI, the keyword density and the organic-looking links. Rather, they just want that keyword repeated as often as possible.

They ask for generic titles for their content:

1. "Best Diet for Abs"
2. "Top Sit Up Exercises"
3. "How to Lose Belly Fat"

They clearly don't know about the niche they're in, they don't care, and they don't have anything new to say.

And as a result, they fill their site with tired, generic and derivative content that is stuffed with keywords and all tied together with an uninspiring brand. Most of them don't even have a logo and the ones that do either made it themselves in MS Paint, or they paid the lowest amount possible and got something really cliché like a lightbulb or a globe with an arrow moving around it.

Then they tell people to follow them on Facebook where they repeatedly post about 'Check out my new ebook HERE'.

They have nothing interesting or new to say. They've done their research, they know the keywords, and they know that this is a good niche to be in.

But they don't understand the niche. They have no heart. And so they are destined for failure.

Worst of all? They have no skill.

Now take a look at the sites you already read on a daily basis. Take a look at your favorite blogs and vlogs. What are they like?

The chances are that they have a clear mission statement and brand. They aren't for everyone, but they have a legion of loyal fans. They have a cool logo, and that logo instantly communicates what their brand is all about and who should listen.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

They post content that is interesting and unique. They have a completely different take on the subject, and they write about the highly advanced aspects that most blogs simply don't know about or miss.

They might write about 'Cardio Acceleration for 30% Faster Fat Loss'.

Or they might write about the role of dopamine in encouraging snacking behavior.

In other words, these posts are interesting and unique. And they have personality – they're written by the brand owner themselves in a way that is passionate and interesting. It's storytelling.

The site is beautiful and well put together. There's a video. There are interactive elements. And the images are crisp and high definition.

In short, it has high production values, and it looks like something that has had time, money and love spent on it.

If you want to succeed online – really succeed – then that's what you need to build “A Memorable Brand”.

How To Create a Memorable Brand

Creating a brand doesn't mean creating a logo. A logo is just one aspect of a brand, and it's not what comes first.

What comes first is a mission statement. A mission statement is a phrase belonging to a business that says what it's all about. This should explain, what, how and why:

1. “What do you make/sell/do?”
2. “How do you do it differently?”
3. “Why do you do it?”

I highly recommend watching Simon Sinek's excellent TED talk on the Golden Circle at this point. It's called How Great Leaders Inspire Action.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Most companies will think about “The What” (we make hats, we design websites, we provide legal advice).

Many will think about “The How” (we use the best materials, we outsource to China, we resell but with a value-add).

But “The Why” is what matters most. This is the motivation that spurred you on to get involved in the business in the first place. It is what makes you get out of bed in the morning.

And it's once again why you CANNOT have a successful website/business in a niche or industry that you don't truly care about.

So, if you have a restaurant, maybe your “Why” is because you want to introduce the world to healthier, cleaner and more responsibly sourced food.

If you have a website about fitness, maybe your “Why” is because you want to inspire the feeling of accomplishment in your audience.

Whatever the case, you need to understand this because it is what will give you your value proposition, it is what will give you your design language, and it is what will create your marketing opportunities and traffic for you.

This will also allow you to find your 'buyer persona'. This is your ideal customer, and through a combination of surveying and of thinking about your brand, you will be able to draw them up.

Finding your fans

Now you need to ensure that your strategy is aimed at this person. It is a huge mistake to make a website that you want to be 'for everyone'. If you do that, then it won't be particularly interesting or inspiring to anyone!

The key is to make people into real fans. Remember, content marketing and 'new SEO' are about the quality of your followers, not the quantity. You want engagement.

“Ask yourself, is your brand the kind of brand that someone can be a fan of?”

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

People don't just know about Apple; they are fans of Apple. People are fans of Tim Ferriss. They like what these brands stand for; they feel they know them. They want to associate with them.

To get to that point – where your site is inspiring to people – you need to stand for something other than getting clicks on your AdSense.

The landscape of the web is changing and you need to understand this if you're going to succeed on the web. So make sure that you understand your "Why" and that you have an idea of what your audience is looking for.

Now make sure that everything from your content, to your social media, to your logo and website design speak to these values.

Viral Marketing With ebooks and Reports

Once you have your brand created, you can start branding everything you write.

Writing a free report or an ebook and placing it on your blog and social media is another great way to generate traffic. Also if that content is shared or promoted, you could have a potential tidal wave of traffic coming your way.

Give Your Book Away

How disappointed would you be if no one opted in at your blog ever? Here is a simple way to increase your list, brand and reputation.

By giving away your best content, you create a link back to your business. This may sound crazy at first, but what is the best way to inspire people and create a following? Provide great content, not substandard content, great content.

If people enjoy your free stuff, they will buy your paid stuff... By giving away great content, you are liking people up as buyers and raving fans.

Do You Have Your Own Free Book?

A free book can be used as leverage to gain subscribers, loyalty and reputation. We have created countless free books. All of these free books and reports have allowed us to build subscribers, gain trust and sell products.

With a free book you can:

1. Increase subscriber loyalty
2. Increase your reputation
3. Build trust

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

4. Build your brand
5. Show your expertise in your niche
6. Increase your opt-in subscriber potential
7. Earn an affiliate income (if that's what you want from your book)
8. Earn a higher ticket income from high priced products

As humans we are naturally lazy. If we can find a shortcut we generally take it. If there is a way of having or doing something quicker we probably will. This isn't necessarily a bad thing, it helps us to move forward faster and grow quicker.

“By providing shortcuts for people, you can build traffic and subscribers”.

Imagine creating an opt-in course for your blog. You supply everyone who took part in it 3 books which they could brand and distribute from their own blog as their own.

This is a fast, quick solution to the harder task of creating their own book. The people who decide to use the free book benefited from some great, instant free information to supply their readers with.

At this point everyone is winning, the reader wins as they are grabbing some great free info. The blog owner wins as they are getting the subscription and the possibility of new customers. You the ebook creator wins because you supply the info and it links back to your blog or online product website.

If you own your own blog you should create your own free books and products. Creating your own ebook can provide you with so much in the long term and give so much to others. It's also rewarding on a personal level, as well as having the benefits of trust and list building I described earlier.

Here are the benefits again:

1. Increase subscriber loyalty
2. Increase your reputation
3. Build trust

4. Build your brand
5. Show your expertise in your niche
6. Increase your opt-in
7. Earn an affiliate income (if that's what you want from your book)

What Can You Create a Book About?

This is probably one of the most asked questions when it comes to creating your own books. And it really isn't that hard. If you already have your own blog then it really shouldn't be a problem.

You already have your passion because you are writing about it on your blog, website or social pages. You just need to channel that passion into a larger book size blog post, or take existing posts and expand on them.

You can even take a group of posts and create an ebook by repurposing these posts. As long as you have the knowledge and content, you will have no problem creating an ebook.

“Remember, if you blog about your niche on a regular basis, you just have to put it all together”.

Writing Without Knowledge of Your Niche

This can be a hard task to achieve. However it's not impossible. You need to spend time reading and researching niches. If you don't have your own blog or your own passions to write about, then you have to research and research well because you are writing as the expert.

Take your time and immerse yourself in your chosen niche. Read it well and absorb all the content you can before you start to create your free product. The last thing you need is to create content that doesn't deliver on it's promise. Do your homework so to speak and you shouldn't have a problem.

Tools For The Job

There is not a great deal of tools you need to create your own book. A simple word processor and PDF converter are the tools of the trade.

To create a free book you will need:

- 1. Word processor – Online Google Docs (free), Microsoft Word or Open Office (free) are all ok. All of these have a PDF exporter integrated.
- 2. Opt-in service - Aweber or similar email subscription service to collect opt-in subscriptions.
- 3. Graphics – eCover for your book. This will cost you somewhere in the region of $10 - $100 for graphics, depending on the creation try 99 designs

These tools are the basics that you will need to create an ebook. You can add to the book by adding graphics and images inside the book from sites such as fotolia and istock photos. There are also free images sites, but please check the usage rights if you use them or at the very least source the images inside your book.

The rest is easy, simply create your book, add your opt-in to your blog and insert the book into your autoresponder service.

Once you have it on auto responder you can advertise it on your blog as a free download in exchange for an email address. Using the free book technique will substantially increase your mailing list.

If you need some help creating a free ebook then check out The ebook Cycle. This book is jammed with information on how to create a great book.

The Viral Effects

The effects of viral books can be huge and travel around the web forever providing you stick with a few rules.

1. Ensure your book is evergreen.
2. Ensure you have links to your blog or other evergreen websites in the header or first pages. These are the pages that are viewed the most. You will be surprised but a lot of readers only read the first two or three pages then close the report and never come back to it.
4. Provide 100% value at all times. There is no point giving a free report or book away that does not do its job. Build a content rich book, free from typos and grammatical mistakes. Most of all, make your book readable!

Follow these rules and you will find it circulating and traffic coming back to you for a long time.

Blog Traffic and How to Get it

We touched on blog traffic in the content marketing chapter earlier in the Big Traffic Guide, so let's expand a little.

Blog traffic is an essential part of your business. Your blog is your communication zone with the world, it's the place where you can provide content and really communicate with your readers and subscribers. Your choice of blog topic is limitless and templates are mostly free, however you can pay for premium templates from a few individual companies. A simple search for free templates or premium templates will pull up an inexhaustible amount to choose from.

Blog Hopping Mad

Blog hopping is a free source of traffic. The principal of the whole thing is to hop from blog to blog posting comments and gaining respect of the blogging community, providing information and additions to other blog posts via comments.

You will gain traffic by placing your own blog link in the website link box in the comment system, which will show on your comments. Providing you give value within your comments, this is a great way to pick up traffic.

If you simply post "good post" in the comment box this is not going to make me as a reader want to look at you or your blog at all. So remember the golden rule "Add Value"!

Try to visit 10 blogs per day and post a comment to everyone. Sign up for blogs and be the first to comment on the latest posts, this will give you a good traffic source back to your blog via the website link in the comment box.

What You Need Displayed On Your Own Blog?

Once you start posting you need to provide equal value on your own blog. If your blog is empty and without value, the reader is not going to stay and subscribe, comment or read. You need to ensure your content is of good quality, to retain readers and get them involved in your content, posts and products and brand.

As discussed earlier, add value by supplying visitors with a free informative report. Here's an example of a free signup box offering a 3 ebook gift:

Guest Posting To Other Niche Blogs

Another great source of traffic is the guest post. By asking for a guest post spot on another blog, (most importantly a popular blog with a good following) you can automatically qualify as an expert in your field.

If you make a top class post, traffic will come back to your own blog through people craving your knowledge of your chosen niche. Guest posting is a great source of traffic and you should try to guest post on a regular basis.

How do you get the guest post?

Asking for a guest post can be very intimidating indeed. You see these superstar bloggers with tons of traffic and great content, and you think to yourself why would these guys want to have my post on their blog?

Believe it or not even the best bloggers need content and they welcome it from guest bloggers. However there are a few rules to follow such as:

- Epic content is essential
- No affiliate links
- No PLR (private label material) No duplicate content
- Must be informative (epic content) Keep to their niche

Once you have a great post to give, you may be tempted to place it on your own blog. But before you do this think of the traffic potential and what you stand to achieve from it – a lot of traffic and equal amounts of new readers if you give the right content.

Asking for a blog post is as simple as sending an email. Don't send a 1000 word email to the blogger you want the attention of? A simple 3 or 4 line email will suffice. Something as simple as:

Title: Guest post opportunity

Hi [blogger],

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

I am an avid reader of your blog content and write in the same niche as yourself and your guest writers.

I have created a great post which I think will work very well within your niche and for your readers.

I have attached my guest post to this email, Please let me know if you like the content.

Thank you for taking the time to view my post.

Kind Regards, [Name]

Most bloggers read all of their emails and usually respond within a couple of days. I find the best time to email a blogger is right after a post. Sometimes bloggers are online to catch the first few comments, and communicate with their readers.

Some blogs actually invite guest posting on their blogs via a special page which is located on their blog. These are usually a set page with a contact form where you can submit your blog to the blogger for a guest spot. Guest posting is a great way to build a following. Just remember to give your best content and traffic will come and stay.

Linking to Other Blogs From Your Own

There are two ways you can do this type of linking:

1. You can add other popular blogs to your own in a Cool Blogs section or your blog then get in touch with other niche blogs of the same type and ask for a reciprocal link between blogs. This helps with track backs and back links and increases your search engine rankings. This is old school and not done much now. The blog roll method is rather outdated.

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

2. You can link directly to other blog posts from your own posts. This enables a community like effect where all bloggers share good posts and express a comment or reference to other posts to provide additional information to support their own.

Using this technique allows for track backlinks from your blog to the blog you linked to in your post. For example if I link to another blog post from my blog post, the blog I am linking to will get an alert to say that I have linked to a particular post of theirs.

Now depending on if the blog I am linking to has pingback or trackback enabled, the blog post I am linking to will see my link from within their admin panel. This way the person I'm trying to get the attention of knows I have been writing about them. They can then choose to share the link on their blog or visit my blog and check out what I have written. Alternatively, you can simply contact the blogger via social media and tell them about your post and the link you have given them.

You have written a post about internet marketing and you decide that your blog is worthy of a mention and you would also like to grab the attention of a blogger. By simply linking to the post from another blog with an active hyperlink, a trackback will be sent to that blog admin panel.

That blogger will now know that you have linked to one of their posts, thus getting their attention.

As well as this simple technique, you can also use social media to tag them on a Facebook post and Twitter posts to alert them about the post and the kudos you have given. Very simple and effective.

Mailing list Traffic

Mailing list traffic is not directly related to visitors stumbling across your sites via search engines or using social networking or ads.

Mailing list traffic is targeted traffic and therefore higher quality traffic. You will hear the phrase “The Money is in The List” well guess what? It is in the list. Your mailing list is one of the most valuable marketing tools you have and not to have one would be a big mistake.

Tools to Use to Collect Email Addresses

There are a number of email collection and distribution companies out there which allow for email collection and also you as the user, have the ability to broadcast email to the guys who are on your mailing lists. The companies that I can recommend are Aweber (My Personal Favourite) and Get response.

How do These Companies Work

All of these companies use email collection facilities to enhance your subscriber lists. Simply building your mailing list of contacts on your local email client will cause you big problems with email companies such as Yahoo, AOL, Hotmail and Gmail to name a few. The reason for these problems is your email address will most certainly get marked as a spam email address and when your email gets marked as a spam email address you may as well close it down as none of your emails will reach your recipients.

If you have your own domain name email address i.e. bigtrafficguide.com you may have your ‘name’ for example attached as an email address name@bigtrafficguide.com. Email companies can and will ban whole domains, so you could end up in big trouble with your email address and also your web hosting company for not adhering to spamming laws.

To prevent spamming using the companies suggested above.

Email Marketing Software

By using email marketing software you can run some great campaigns to generate your mailing lists and increase your traffic to sites by broadcasting to your list.

Some list building ideas include:

Free ebook reports - The reader must sign up to your mailing list to get the report. This is a very simple operation where you create an ebook, video series or report and use a simple squeeze page with an opt-in box placed on the page from your recommended software provider in this case Aweber.

Almost There! Add Your Email and Grab Your FREE Guides

<small>Your email address will never be shared!</small>

Newsletter signups – Basically the same operation as your free report or ebook squeeze page, but you would have your opt-in on the page of one of your websites or blog. It helps to add newsletter opt-ins to all of your websites to build your mailing list.

Blog signup updates – Very similar to newsletters but by placing an opt-in on your blog you can alert guys to when your blog has been updated and also when you have any notifications or promotions.

3 Benefits of Mailing List Traffic

1. Targeted lists who actually want to be alerted to your promotions and information
2. The ability to send your subscribers to other websites as bulk traffic e.g. you have a list of 50k subscribers and you send them all an email to take a look at your new website.
3. The ability to utilise your mailing list to send traffic to product promotions of other products via affiliate links for an affiliate income.

5 Powerful Types of Content

YouTube Content

Starting a YouTube channel is something that many brands don't consider. But they do so at their peril.

Because YouTube is the world's leading source of video content, with 83% of consumers watching content on the platform. For reference, Facebook occupies the number 2 spot with 67%.

What's more, 7 out of 10 viewers watch videos to get 'help with a problem' they're experiencing in their job, studies or hobby.

The implication? Producing primarily educational content aimed at resolving your audience's struggles is the way to set yourself up for success.

There are lots of video formats to choose, such as:

- Explainer videos
- Tutorials
- Whiteboard animations
- Interviews
- Talking head
- Vlogs & more

For some inspiration, check out how meditation provider Headspace uses their YouTube channel to educate, inspire and entertain their audience. Their helpful animations and tutorials gently guide viewers and subscribers closer to their brand.

The great thing about creating video content for YouTube is that you can easily repurpose it for other channels.

For example, you can easily take the audio from an interview and turn it into a podcast. Or you can cut video snippets and post them to social media to give your followers micro-nuggets of wisdom.

User Generated Content

Many brands are overlooking the potential that social offers by skipping over user-generated content. In fact, just a measly 16% of brands have a documented strategy regarding user-generated content.

And that's a shame because research has shown that UGC pulls in around 28% higher engagement compared to standard company posts.

What's more, almost 50% of consumers say that UGC helps them find new products.

BIG TRAFFIC GUIDE

In fact, a recent case study by clothing brand Burberry attributed a 51% jump in eCommerce sales year-on-year to the results of their UGC strategy. Fifty-one-per-cent! Ay caramba!

The best part about UGC? You don't even have to create it. Your brand advocates do the heavy lifting it for you.

But you do need to encourage them because over half of consumers want brands to tell them what type of content to create.

How? It's simple: create a #hashtag campaign.

Just check out how online furniture store Wayfair have created a campaign around the hashtag #WayfairAtHome to turn their customers into content creators:

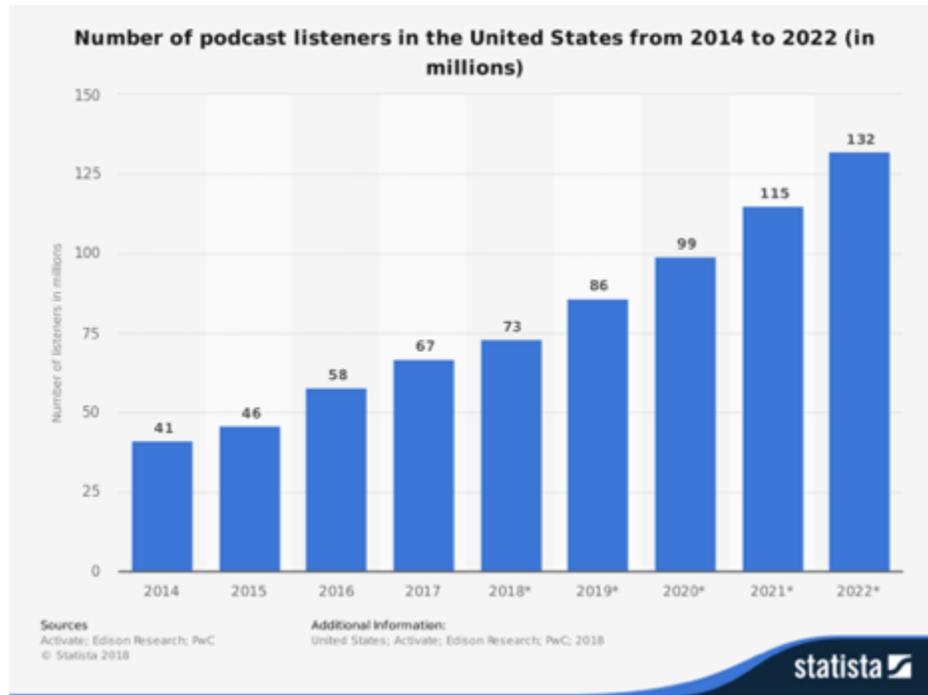

Podcasting

The popularity of podcasts is on the up. In 2018, there were 48 million weekly podcast listeners, but by 2021 that's expected to jump to 115 million.

BIG TRAFFIC GUIDE

And right now the marketplace is not crazy competitive. There are around 80 million Facebook business pages - but there are only about 750,000 podcasts airing on a regular basis.

This high demand, coupled with low supply means that now is the perfect time to add podcasting to your content marketing arsenal.

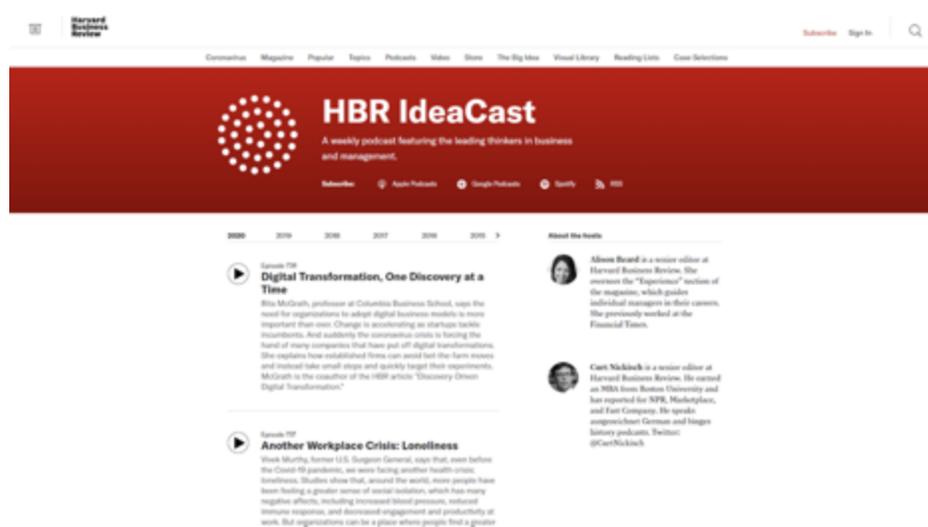

Especially when you consider that the average podcast listener earns between \$10-20k more than the average US consumer - with 15% of listeners earning $150,000+. Did somebody say higher purchasing power?

For inspiration, check out how Harvard Business Review uses their podcast 'HBR Ideacast' to give their audience a glimpse into the thinking of some of the world's biggest companies.

Infographics

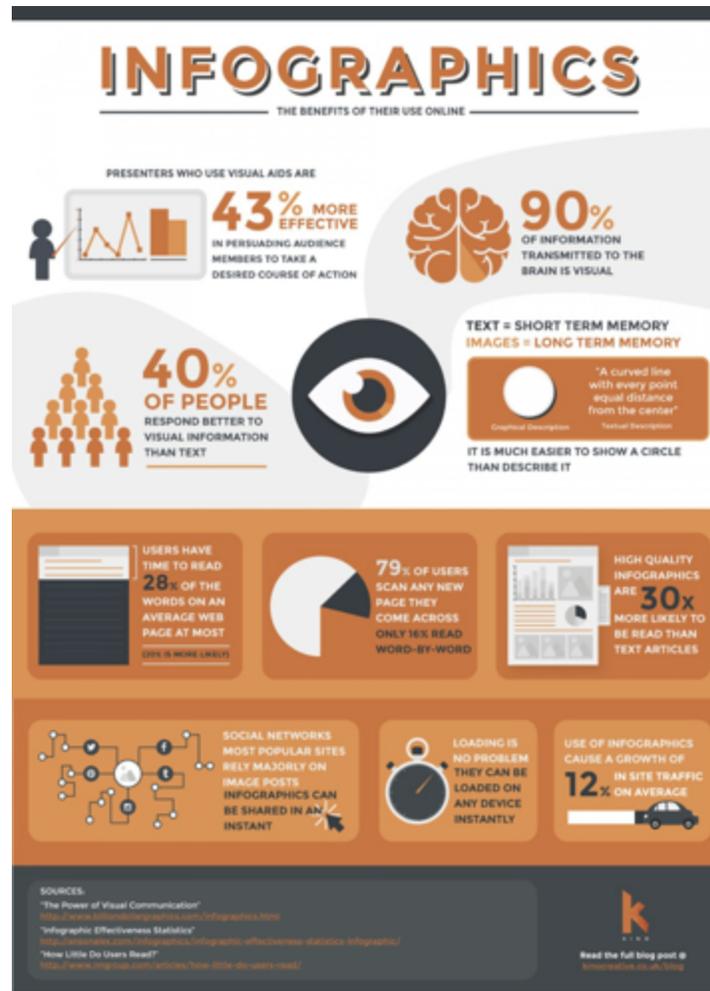

Okay, infographics aren't always strictly 'text-free', but they're predominantly a visual medium that you shouldn't overlook.

Why? Well, how about I let an infographic do the talking for me?

BIG TRAFFIC GUIDE

A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BUILDING TRAFFIC FLOWS TO YOUR BLOGS AND WEBSITES

Pretty powerful stuff. As the old adage goes 'a picture is worth a thousand words'.

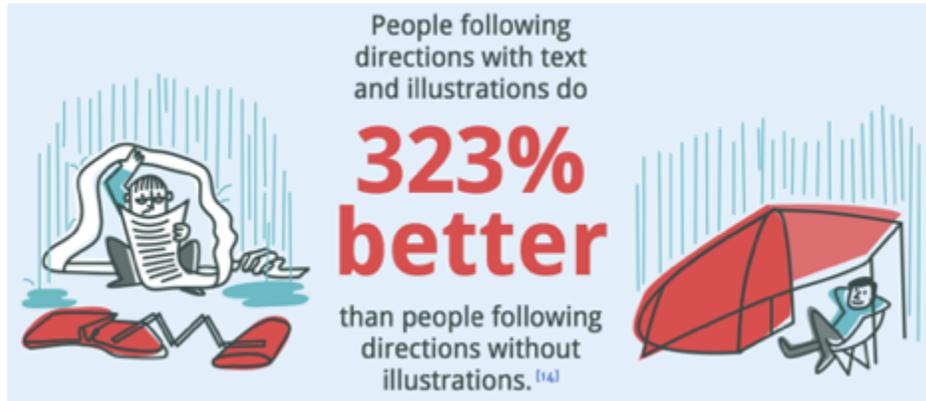

Infographics appeal to us because they're so easy to consume. The mental effort required to get 'the gold' is so low that we're more likely to retain the message.

In fact, when relevant images are used, eye-tracking studies show readers spend more time looking at the images than they do reading text on the page.

Plus infographics have serious potential to go viral - being shared widely across the web they'll help you pick up valuable backlinks and boost your SEO rankings without you lifting a finger.

You might be thinking, that's great - but I can't afford to hire a graphic designer right now. Don't worry, you don't have to.

You can use a tool like Pictochart to create beautiful infographics with a simple drag and drop editor. Who says life needs to be complicated?

Online Courses

Developing educational courses is an incredibly powerful content marketing tactic.

Courses are especially potent if you're selling higher-priced services or software, but they can still be useful for physical products too.

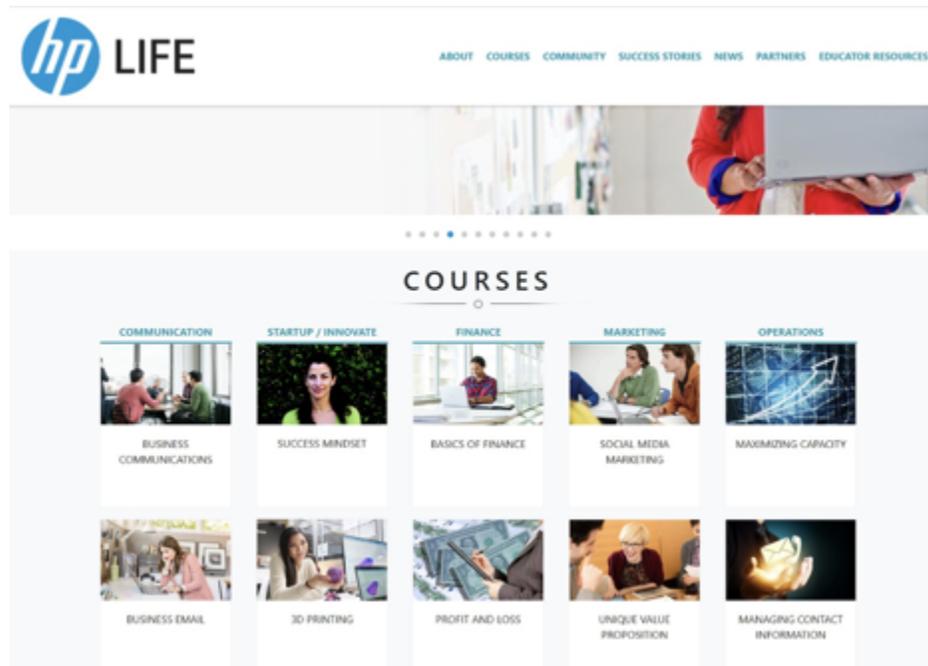

Sharing your professional experience with your audience creates a strong sense of reciprocity and showcases your expertise.

Take software company HPLife, for example. They offer business and start-up courses for free, with some of HP's products at the heart of each lesson.

They've improved how hundreds of thousands of entrepreneurs run their business, but better yet, they've indirectly trained those people to use their products and services.

Obviously creating a course of your own doesn't have to involve the level of effort HP have put into their Life academy.

You can use a platform like Teachable (or YouTube is always good) to create free short courses. Or even just run a once-off webinar focused on educating your audience.

“Hot tip - Create your own high value and high ticket courses. These will boost your traffic via customer base and also your high ticket income! Most online entrepreneurs have their own high value training courses, charging upward of $1000 for each customer”.
